With prominent Sunday school workers from all parts of the county in attendance and George W. Penniman, secretary of the Allegheny county Sabbath school association and Dr. Warrington of the Bible school at Boston, Mass. as the leading speakers, the 25th annual convention of the Allegheny county Sunday school association convened this morning in the First Baptist church. Word was received yesterday from Dr. Walter S. Atkarn of Boston, Mass. that he would be impossible for him to attend the convention. Dr. Warrington takes his place on the program at all sessions.

At 2 o'clock today 225 delegates had registered and many more were expected to arrive this afternoon. The auditorium of the First Baptist church where the main sessions of the convention are to be held was comfortably filled with delegates and visitors at the opening session and the program was carried out nearly on schedule time.

L. G. Chorprenning, president of the county association, presided and introduced the speakers. The convention opened with a praise service conducted by Mrs. Irene Hammons. Miss Mary Keck presided at the piano. Rev. Francis J. Scott, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, conducted the devotion exercises which were followed by singing in charge of Mrs. Hammons by the audience.

Mr. Penniman gave a splendid address on "The Challenge of a Great Task," a subject fitting the occasion. In the beginning he gave statistics from the Allegheny county Sunday school association, which has 15,000 scholars and teachers and a contribution of $125,000.

"We are building a new era into which we have moved since the close of the war. Never has there been such an hour of chaos as we have at the present time. One of our greatest needs is a league of 100 per cent Christian Americans," said Mr. Penniman. He stated that the Sunday school stands for Christian character and good citizenship, that each school should have a real goal to work for and that the four principal aims of the Sunday school are to reach, teach, win and train. After stating Sunday school workers for Jesus Christ and His work, they must be trained for all departments in Christian service.

The speaker said Mr. Penniman is an eloquent speaker and his address was of a very instructive nature to Sunday school workers, who had the opportunity to hear him.

The next period was taken up with a pleasing solo. Hold Thou My Hand by Mrs. Irene Hammons. Mrs. Hammons is the possessor of a rare and sweet voice and has a very pleasing manner. Dr. Warrington's address came next. He chose as his subject "Religious Education. He is a very forceful speaker. Following his address the convention adjourned until this afternoon at 1:15. Miss Elsie McBurney, Miss Ruth Furlong and Miss Elizabeth Patterson are in charge of the registration of delegates at the Christian church.

The program for the afternoon was opened by Rev. J. H. Lamberton. The speakers of the afternoon were Dr. Warrington, and Mr. Penniman. After their addresses conferences were to be held, with Mr. Warrington and Mr. Penniman as speakers.

WASHINGTON FIELD CLUB OF PITTSBURG WILL MEET COKERS HERE SATURDAY

It is Among Leaders in Independent Baseball in Smoky City.

LUTHERAN TEAM VICTOR

John J. Verona's Washington Field club and the local Independents will be the star attraction at Fayette field this week-end. The two teams will clash Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, in what promises to be one of the best games so far this season. Washington Field club is rated as one of the best outfits playing out of Pittsburgh. The culture of the organization can be judged by the fact that it was the only team to defeat Vason town two straight games last season. Another fast bunch of losers is town of W. the Castle Cords of New Castle. This season Verona club has been traveling at its usual fast clip and among the victims have been Vason town School, the solar team and holding Tyler Tube to a 5 to 3 score. As fast as the visitors are rated, they will show that they have been in a ball game when the ninth inning rolls around as the locals are expected to pay a brand of ball that has, with the full approval of the fan, been work now is a dominating feature of the Independents playing with the locals in a way that wins ball games they are readily getting support.

The male fans that expect the last brand of ball that is now being played by the Independents should not overlook the fact that it will not be at them until to take their lady friends to the games. The club wants the patronage of the fair sex, put the fellows who have a sweetie or a life or sister should take them to Fayette field Saturday and every Saturday that follows.

The Math arrived in Cleveland this spring. The left-hander has a special delivery stamp on his offerings now.

Chief Pollock was not good enough for the Southern league, but he is quite a big Indian in the Western as a leaguer.

Any man who has filled out an income tax blank ought to find the job of figuring a batting average comparatively easy.

Big leaguer scouts will now Harry Williams, high school hurler, pitched a night, no-run game.

Hughie Jennings' size-up of Ty Cobb's Tigers is that they'll finish one-two-three. Hughie once was considered a good guesser.

The Den Moines club gave Pitcher Glenn Meadows his unconditional release. Pitcher Fred Delborn has been put on the voluntary retired list.

When they hosted the championship pennant at Cleveland, the first that Cleveland ever had behind even the wind panned in curiosity to greet it.

Joplin's rookie outfielder Gabby Strain has been going so good that at least one big league scout has made a trip to the Western league to give him a looking over.

Some deep delve into statistics has figured that Eddie Roush this year will draw 20 cents for every step he takes in playing the mason out for the Cincinnati club. That means 80,000 steps in 140 or so games.

A MAN FOR THE AGES

A STORY OF THE BUILDERS OF DEMOCRACY
BY IRVING BACHELLER

"It didn't reach me. One day in June the stage was robbed of its mail in the town of Hazewell county. Your letter was probably on that stage."

"Harry's death was the last blow I put out here to get away from my troubles—perhaps to die. I didn't care."

"Harry is not dead," said Samson. Her right hand touched her forehead; her lips fell apart, her eyes took on a look of tragic earnestness. "Not dead," she whispered. "He is alive and well."

Shaking and Choked With Sobs.

shadow of the coming night. She looked like one searching in the dust for something very precious. The strong heart of Samson was touched by the sorrowful look of her so that he could not speak.

"Soon he was able to say in a low, trembling voice:

"To every letter he tells of his love for you. That article in the paper was a cruel mistake."

After a little silence Sam rose from the ground. She stood, for a moment, wiping her eyes. Her form straightened and was presently erect. Her soul resented the injustice she had suffered. There was a wonderful and touching dignity in her voice and manner when she asked: "Why didn't he write to me?"

"He must have written to you."

Nearly, calmly, thoughtfully, she spoke as she stood looking off at the fading glow in the west:

"It is terrible how things can work together to break the heart and will of a woman. Write to Harry and tell him that he must not come to see me again. I have promised to marry another man."

"I hope it isn't Davis," said Samson. "It is Davis."

"I don't like him. I don't think he's honest."

"But he has been wonderfully kind to us. Without his help we couldn't have lived. We couldn't even have given my father a decent burial."

"Has he been out here to see you?"

"No."

"And he won't come. That man knows how to keep out of danger. I don't believe you'll marry him."

"Why?"

"Because I intend to be a father to you and pay all your debts," said Samson.

The doctor called from the door of the cabin.

Sam said: "God bless you and Harry!" as she turned away to take up her task again.

That night both of them began, as they say, to put two and two together. While he wrote on in the growing dusk the keen intellect of Samson saw a convincing sequence of circumstances—the theft of the mail stage, the false account of Harry's death, the failure of his letters to reach their destination, and the fact that Sam had accepted money from Davis in time of need. A surmise of foul play grew upon him and he began to consider what he could do in the matter. Having forced a creek he caught the glow of a light in the darkness, a little way up the road. It was the lighted window of a cabin, before whose door he stepped his horse and halted.

"I am a belated and hungry traveler on my way to Chicago," he said to the man who presently greeted him from the open doorway.

"Have you come through Honey Creek settlement?" the latter asked. "Let there about an hour ago."

"Harry, mister, but I can't let you come into the house. If you'll leave off a few feet I'll lay some grub on the cheap! block an' up the road about a half-mile you'll find a barn with some hay in it, where you and your horse can spend the night under cover."

Samson moved away and soon the man brought a package of food and laid it on the block and ran back to the door.

"I'll lay a piece of silver on the block," Samson called.

"Not a darned cent," the man answered. "I hate like poison to turn a feller away in the night, but we're awful skinned here with children in the house. Goodbye. You can't miss the barn. It's right ag'in the road."

Samson ate his lunch in the darkness, as he rode, and presently came upon the barn and unsaddled and hitched and fed his horse in one end of it—the barn having drunk his fill at the creek they had lately forded—and lay down to rest for the night, with the saddle blanket beneath him and his coat for a cover. A wind from the north began to wail and whistle through the cracks in the barn and over its roof, bringing cold weather. Samson's feet and legs had been wet in the crossing, so that he found it difficult to keep warm. He crept to the side of his horse, which had laid down, and found a degree of comfort in the heat of the animal. But it was a bad night, at best.

"I've had many a long, hard night, but this is the worst of them," Samson thought.

There's many a bad night in the history of the pioneers, its shadows falling on lonely, ill-marked roads, cut by rivers, creeks and marshes and strung through unnumbered miles of wild country. Samson was up and off at daylight in a bitter wind and six inches of snow. It was a kind of work he would not have undertaken upon any call less commanding than that of friendship.

He reached Chicago at noon, having had nothing to eat that day. There was no such eager, noisy crowd in the streets as he had seen before. The fever of speculation had passed. But there were many people on the main thoroughfares, among whom were Europeans who had arrived the autumn before. They were changing but the marks of the yoke were still upon them. In Chicago were the vitals of the West and they were very much alive in spite of the panic.

Samson bought some new clothes and had a bath and a good dinner at the City hotel. Then he went to the office of Mr. Lionel Davis. There to his surprise he met his old acquaintance, Eli Fredenberg, who greeted him with great warmth and told of having settled in Chicago.

A well-dressed young man came out of an inner office.

"I'd like to see Mr. Davis," said Samson. "Tell him that I've got some money that belongs to him and that I'm ready to deliver it."

The young man disappeared through the door of the private office and soon returned and conducted Samson into the presence of Mr. Davis. The two men recognized each other.

"Well, sir, what is it about?" the young speculator demanded.

"The daughter of my old friend, Jack Kelso, owes you some money and I want to pay it," said Samson.

"Oh, that is a matter between Miss Kelso and me," Mr. Davis spoke politely and with a smile.

"Not exactly—since I knew about it," Samson answered.

"I refuse to discuss her affairs with you," Davis declared.

"I suppose you mistrust me," said Samson. "Well, I've offered to pay you and I'm going to make it plain to them that they don't have to worry any more about the money you loaned them."

"Very well, I bid you good morning."

"Don't be in a hurry," Samson answered. "I have a note of five thousand dollars against you. It is endorsed to me by Henry Brimstead and I want to collect it."

"I refuse to pay it," Davis promptly answered.

THOUSANDS ATTEND FLAG DAY EXERCISES HELD AT SCOTSDALE

Floral Liberty Bell Service
and Dedication of Creed Tablet Features.

REP. W. H. NEWTON SPEAKS

Minnesota Member of National House
Chief Orator of Most Impressive Observance of Kind in Town's History; Excellent Program Provided.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, June 15.—The most impressive observance of Flag Day in the history of the town was that of yesterday, under the auspices of Scottdale Lodge of Elks, with representative Walter H. Newton of Minnesota and Judge James S. Beacons of Greensburg as the principal speakers and with the observance being featured by a floral Liberty Bell service and the dedication of an American Creed tablet in front of the Elks home
at Pittsburg and Stoner streets.

Thousands assembled at Loughs park for the formal Flag Day exercises, which began at 7 o'clock. The Elks formed at the home and marched to the park. Representative Newton and Representative Samuel A. Kendall of Greensburg, Judge Beacons and others, riding in automobiles, in the procession, which was led by the Scottdale
Military Band. Representative
Kendall was not on the list of speakers but occupied a place on the stand with Representative Newton, who is a close friend.

The exercises at the park lasted an hour and 15 minutes. The introductory exercises were conducted by
C. F. Lewis, James Bates, J. E. Sturgis, Homer Graft, James J. Keegan and V. H. Galbraith. Prayer was offered by Rev. C. C. Rich, pastor of the First Baptist church. Attorney Edward A. Kennedy gave a brief history of the flag. "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played by the band, following which the floral Liberty Bell service was conducted, with V. H. Galbraith in charge. J. E. Sturgis laid the foundation for the bell, of roses;
Homer Graft the center of lilacs;
while James J. Keegan crowned it with violets, the three colors of flowers representing those of the flag. Mr.
Galbraith built the beams that supported the flag, these representing the 13 colonies.

Following this service Judge Beacons spoke, delivering a tribute to the flag. Miss Mabel Ziron appeared next on the program in a vocal solo, and then Representative Newton was introduced. His address was an eloquent one dealing with the necessity of inculcating love and respect for the flag and patriotism in the growing population of the nation. The closing exercises by members of the lodge and "America" by the band ended the program at the park.

The procession re-formed and marched to the Elks Home where the tablet was dedicated. The base for the tablet did not arrive in time for the ceremony but the exercises were gone through with as scheduled. Captain John J. Kennedy delivered the address of the occasion and the tablet was unveiled by Peter Horne and John Sterrett, veterans of the Civil War.

Representatives Newton and Kendall were entertained at dinner at the home of Walter F. Stauffer, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the observance of the day. They left after the exercises for Conneltsville, taking a train for Washington.
